Twelve Capital Group refines its organisational structure

Twelve Capital has introduced a revised organisational structure to prepare for future growth whilst preserving focus on performance generation and client orientation.

Marcel Wildhaber and Nils Ossenbrink assume responsibility for day-to-day management as Co-Managing Partners and head the Group Management Committee. This committee oversees all aspects of operational business activities including client services and distribution efforts.

Additionally reflecting the firm's focus on performance generation, an Investment Oversight Committee has been established as a focal point for investment activities and governance. The committee is chaired by Urs Ramseier who maintains his role as Executive Chairman and CIO, and continues to place a strong emphasis on both investments and clients, with a focus on further driving innovation and building out the firm's international distribution activities.

Co-Founder and Executive Vice Chairman Christoph Buerer comments: "These organisational changes and appointments reflect the evolution of our firm and continuity. They also demonstrate our dedication to a disciplined investment approach and engagement with clients which builds upon our solid operational platform."
