A summary of the analysis and conclusions the Group draws from its detailed monitoring of the quality of execution obtained on the execution venues where it executed all client orders in the previous year

(a) Equities - Shares & Depositary Receipts

Currently Twelve Capital undertakes all equity transactions via Credit Suisse acting as appointed broker/intermediary and does not subscribe to any exchange for these purposes. Consequently, the Firm relies on the best execution ability of the intermediary who places both buy and sell trades on behalf of Twelve Capital's clients. The ability to monitor Best Execution under such circumstance is limited and therefore the Group has taken the view that the broker will be acting in the best interests of the Group and its clients regarding placement, timing and more importantly swiftness to the exchange in respect of any given transaction. Best execution compliance processes are particularly important in lower liquidity shares (most often small market capitalisation shares) as price movements can be significantly influenced by volume or (for Twelve Capital purposes) in the event of a natural catastrophe. In such cases, the Group utilises strategies to minimise market impact such as volume-weighted average price (VWAP) which attempts to beat or match the average trading prices in the market over a pre-specified period, ranging from intra-day to a full day. For larger orders executed across a period of time, or in lower liquidity the Group will additionally take into account minimising the impact on the market, and slippage historically achieved on each venue. Where transactions are executed indirectly, relevant factors are overall costs including counterparty fee schedules, impact and observed slippage. The impact of implicit costs must be taken into account when considering the execution strategy of orders to ensure that they are managed and do not result in an undue impact to total costs.

The monitoring undertaken supported that best execution was followed consistently on the approved execution venues throughout the year.

(b) Debt instruments

Twelve Capital often invests in debt instruments that are newly issued in the primary market where there is only one venue available for execution. Best execution is considered to be followed for primary market trades due to the fact that there are no other available execution venues.

As part of Twelve Capital's analysis on execution quality for debt instruments traded where there is a secondary market, comprising mainly bonds and fixed income notes, the Group primarily makes reference to Bloomberg's last traded price, where available, broker prices where available or pricing obtained via TSOX. In order to obtain pricing comfort given there may not be an ability to seek multiple quotes, multiple or single broker quotes may be obtained where no electronic process can be utilised.

The periodic monitoring completed for 2021 supported that best execution was followed consistently on the approved execution venues throughout the year.

Best Execution Qualitative Information

Annual Best Execution Disclosure 2021

An explanation of the relative importance the Group gave to the execution factors of price, costs, speed, likelihood of execution or any other consideration including qualitative factors when assessing the quality of execution.

Best execution is a key element in Twelve Capital's commitment to act in the best interests of its clients, in addition to being a regulatory requirement. The Group prioritises ensuring that all sufficient steps are taken to obtain the best possible result for its clients when it executes, places or transmits orders on their behalf. This means taking into account 'execution factors' such as price, costs, speed, likelihood of execution and settlement, size, nature or any other consideration relevant to the execution of the order.

The relative importance of the execution factors is assessed on an order-by-order basis in line with the Group's best execution policy, its industry experience and prevailing market conditions. In addition, key factors for relevant asset classes have been identified as follows:

(a) Equities - Shares & Depositary Receipts

For small indirect orders over a short period of time, the key factors are generally price, quantity based on market availability, and likelihood of execution. For larger orders executed over a longer period of time, the Group additionally takes into account confidentiality, regulatory obligations, minimising the impact on the market, and slippage historically achieved on each venue.

The impact of implicit costs is taken into account when considering the execution strategy of orders to ensure that they are managed and do not result in an undue impact to overall costs.

(b) Debt instruments

Due to the nature of the orders the Group will typically place price, size, cost and the nature of the transaction as factors of primary importance.

(c) Currency Derivatives

Where derivatives are executed directly, key factors typically considered are price, observed volume on exchange, and overall transaction costs. Prices are compared via a request for quote ("RFQ"); taking into account additional transaction costs that may be applicable. When transactions are time-sensitive, response time to RFQ may be a defining factor. On occasion, preference may be given to counterparties that are operationally easier to work with where time factors are at play. Where orders are executed indirectly, relevant factors are costs and the existing counterparty relationship. For more illiquid derivatives, where execution options are available, historical price and liquidity are the key factors for execution.

When selecting execution venues, the Group does not take into account the non-monetary benefits it may obtain in connection with the services provided to its clients, but focuses on the potential of the venues to enable the Group to obtain on a consistent basis the best possible result for the execution of its client orders. However, the Group does take into account the effect of fees and commission when choosing a venue for the execution of a particular client order.
