Conflicts of interest

The Twelve Capital Group maintains a conflict of interest policy which aims to identify, record, report, manage, avoid and disclose conflicts of interests.

Conflicts of interests may arise between the firm (including its managers or employees) and a client or a service provider, or between two or more clients. The firm takes all appropriate steps to identify such conflicts by taking into account, inter alia, if the firm (i) is likely to make a financial gain, or avoid a financial loss, at the expense of the client, (ii) has an interest in the outcome of a service provided to the client or of a transaction carried out on behalf of the client, which is distinct from the client's interest in that outcome, (iii) has a financial or other incentive to favour the interest of another client or group of clients over the interests of the client or (iv) receives or will receive from a person other than the client an inducement in relation to a service provided to the client, other than the standard commission or fee for that service.

When the firm has identified a conflict of interest, it will record and report such conflicts to its management at least on an annual basis.

When managing and trying to avoid conflicts of interest, the firm places the clients interests first at all times without exception. The firm must not provide services in a manner that will advance one client's interests unfairly ahead of another client's interests. The firm takes steps to prevent the crystallisation of conflicts of interest by inter alia using information barriers, functional independence and a regular review of remuneration rules. Termination of an activity causing a conflict of interest can be a means to ultimately avoid such conflicts of interests.

Where a conflict of interest cannot be managed in a practical or suitable enough way to ensure that the interests of clients are adequately protected, it may be appropriate to disclose the conflict of interest to the affected client(s).

Appropriateness and suitability

When providing investment services to professional clients or eligible counterparties, the required knowledge, experience and ability to bear loss with regard to the provided financial service are presumed and no separate appropriateness assessment will be conducted.

When providing investment advice to professional clients or eligible counterparties, a suitability statement will not be issued. However, when providing investment advice to professional clients, Twelve will verify that no recommendations are given to clients or prospects which are not suitable for them. That means all financial services provided resp. financial instruments recommended shall meet the client's investment objectives and suitability preferences.

Cost information

TCDE does not directly charge any fees to investors for the services it provides. Investors will be charged by the fund manager the costs and charges disclosed in the relevant funds documentation (prospectus/ private placement memorandum, (semi-) annual reports, KIID) for the manufacturing and managing of the funds.

Inducements

TCDE does not receive inducements from external third parties regarding the services provided. TCDE receives payments via intra-group transfer pricing arrangements for its distribution services from its sister company, Twelve Capital AG in Zurich, Switzerland. These intra-group payments are TCDE's only source of income.
